

Please do not relax the rules that deter single companies from owning multiple media outlets. The huge financial clout of such conglomerations serves to drown out the free speech of smaller, more independent operators, which serves to diminish the robust debate of issues that is necessary in a healthy democracy.

Respectfully, John Glasel